PREFACE

The Byzantine Kyivan rite developed in the territories of the Metropolitanate of Kyiv which, being of Byzantine origin, from the beginning inherited to a great extent both the good and the bad aspects of the Byzantine Church, as well as its problems. Kyiv, the Kyivan Rus' State and the Kyivan Metropolitanate were in the northeastern area of Greek-Roman culture and civilization, and the Metropolitanate found itself at a very early date on the crossroads between Constantinople and Rome. Later it was caught in the triangle—Rome, Constantinople, Moscow, and in the twentieth century in the quadrangle—Rome, Constantinople, Moscow and Autocephalism.

The original Metropolitanate of Kyiv has been split twice on the question of Constantinople or Rome, first after the Union of Florence (1439) and second after the Union of Berestja (1596). Because of the Union of Florence, Moscow, which belonged to the Metropolitanate of Kyiv, separated itself from the jurisdiction of the legal Kyivan Metropolitan Isidore (1436-1458), who had signed the Union agreement, and elected its own Metropolitan Jona (1448-1461). Because of the signing of the Union of Berestja by the Kyivan Metropolitan Mychajlo Rahoza (1558-1599), the opposers of the Union split the Metropolitanate with the assistance of Constantinople and Moscow, and created another Kyivan Metropolitanate in 1620, initially dependent upon Constantinople, but soon after, from 1686 on, dependent upon Moscow.

The problem of being in the triangle—Rome, Constantinople, Moscow, and later in the quadrangle—Rome, Constantinople, Moscow, Autocephalism, is not only a question of ecclesiastical jurisdiction. It is also a cultural and political question, which in time created a crisis of identity.

The millenium of the conversion of Kyivan Rus' (988) is approaching. A triple question presents itself, the answer to which involves the past, present and future. Did Kyivan Christianity and the Kyivan Church exist, and if so, what was it? Does it exist now, and if so, what is it? Will it exist in the future, and if so, what will it be?

Kyiv was on the marching road from Asia to western Europe. It was exposed to barbarian invasions and eventually lost its independence. Loss of religious and cultural unity followed the loss of independence, and to a great extent the concept of political, cultural and religious identity was lost. The question of identity is not only political, cultural, religious or ritual; it is also psychological—a question of self respect.

The person without an identity, or clear definition as to who he is and where he came from, is unsure of his own being, and lacks self respect. He in consequence does not command the respect of others. Without identity, the person or group has practically no entity, and is doomed to be a historical zero.

The ancient Romans had a saying, “Historia est magistra vitae”—“History is the teacher of life”—that is, history teaches us to solve the problems of the present and to plan for the future. The more we know of the past, the better able we will be to cope with the present and plan the future well. Through wars on the native territories of the Byzantine Kyivan Church, many documents of the past were destroyed, and much of what has survived is inaccessible. The research for this present study has been done from sources available outside of the occupied territories of the Kyivan Metropolitanate. It has been done in the hope of making some contribution to an affirmation of our identity as people of Byzantine Kyivan rite, by establishing where we were and how many we were, and where we are and how many we are. This knowledge should help indicate to us our future—where we will be and how many we will be.

My sincere thanks are to the Venezuelan group, Friends of Ukrainian Church History: Fedir and Vira Jakymec, Dr. Roman and Edelmira Prypchan, and Julijan and Oleksandra Žyznevskyj, for the financial help which enabled me to do the research required for this study, and to the Ukrainian Catholic University of St. Clement in Rome, through whose kind generosity I was able to publish the results.

INTRODUCTION

By the 10th century, the Kyivan Rus' State extended over all of the Eastern European Slavic tribes, which with different tribal names actually formed the core of three distinct Slavic nations, presently called Ukrainians, Belorussians and Russians. With the official introduction of Christianity in 988 in Kyiv and the Kyivan Rus' State, St. Volodymyr the Great made Kyiv a center of the Byzantine rite and of Byzantine culture. Since Kyiv was distant from and politically independent of Constantinople, almost immediately a distinct religious entity was formed, the Constantinopolitan Uniate Metropolitanate of Kyiv, with jurisdiction over Ukrainian, Belorussian and Russian territories, and in time the Byzantine Kyivan rite and culture was developed.

After the destruction of Kyiv by the Tartars in 1240, two new Eastern European political centers evolved—Halyč, then Lviv, in the southwest, and, Suzdal, Vladimir, then Moscow, in the northeast. The political unity of the Kyivan State disappeared, but for a time the religious unity of the Metropolitanate of Kyiv remained and with it, to a certain extent, remained unity of rite and culture, until the definitive split of the Kyivan Metropolitanate in about the middle of the fifteenth century. This split was the result of the Union of Florence in 1439, when the Russians opposed the union agreement which had been signed by Isidore, the Metropolitan of Kyiv (1436-1458), and elected Jona, the Bishop of Rjazan, as their own Metropolitan in Moscow in 1448. Jona attempted to impose his jurisdiction over Kyiv and the Ukrainian and Belorussian territories, but with little success. Isidore, the last legal Metropolitan with jurisdiction over all three nations, resigned in 1458, and Pope Pius II (1458-1464) appointed a new Metropolitan of Kyiv, Gregory (1458-1472), with jurisdiction over ten dioceses—Kyiv, Halyč, Peremyśl, Cholm, Volodymyr, Luck, Turiv (Pinsk), Brjansk (Černihiv), Polock and Smolensk (1)—practically all Ukrainian and Belorussian territories with the addition of some Russian territories, all of which at that time formed part of the Polish-Lithuanian State. As far as those dioceses of the Principality of Moscow were concerned, Rome was not specific. Moscow went its own way, her Metropolitan exercising authority over these dioceses, and in 1589 obtained the title of Patriarchate, in time forming not only the Byzantine Moscovite Church, but also the Byzantine Moscovite rite.

Because Kyiv was exposed to continuous invasions by the Tartars, the Metropolitans of Kyiv after 1458 usually resided in the northwestern part of the Kyivan diocese, maintaining the religious unity of the Metropolitanate within Ukrainian and Bielorrussian territories. The name commonly used at that time for both nations was Ruthenian, for Church, rite and nationality.

The union of the Metropolitanate was broken when the majority of the Kyivan Church hierarchy, the Metropolitan and the Bishops of Cholm, Volodymyr, Luck, Pinsk and Polock, changed from union with Constantinople to union with Rome at the Synod of Berestja in 1596. The Bishops of Lviv and Peremyśl, although they had signed the preliminary agreement for union with Rome, changed their minds and remained in union with Constantinople. The definitive split occurred in 1620 when, at the instigation of Constantinople and Moscow, Bishops depending from Constantinople were ordained by Theophane, the Patriarch of Jerusalem, while he was returning to his own See from Moscow, thus causing a duplication of members of the hierarchy. The Roman Uniates and the Constantinopolitan Uniates both for a while retained the same Kyivan rite. In 1686, the Constantinopolitan Uniates changed over from dependence upon Constantinople to dependence upon Moscow, thus becoming Moscovite Uniates. During the course of the eighteenth century, partly through pressure from Moscow, and partly through Russian reeducation of the clergy, the Moscovite Uniates gradually accepted the Byzantine Moscovite rite in place of the Byzantine Kyivan rite. Therefore, since the eighteenth century, the Byzantine Kyivan rite has been conserved and practiced only by those in union with Rome according to the Union of Berestja (1596) and the Union of Užhorod (1646).

With the political growth of Moscow and the military occupation of the Ukrainian and Bielorrussian territories by the Russians during the eighteenth and twentieth centuries, the Byzantine Catholic Church was suppressed and the jurisdiction and rite of Moscow was imposed. The Byzantine Kyivan rite remained in practice only where the Moscovite military occupation did not reach. Gradually, some western usages were introduced into the Byzantine Kyivan rite, especially by priests educated in western colleges and seminaries, but these were often local rather than general usages. During and after World War II, Latin influences were removed by Rome, and uniform religious books, the Recensio Ruthena, with Ordo Celebrationis were printed (2) and imposed, distinct from the Byzantine rite of other centers, including that of the Byzantine Moscovite rite.

After the Bielorrussians accepted the present term Bielorussian for themselves, the name Ruthenian remained only with the Ukrainians. The Ukrainians, in the second part of the nineteenth century, changed Ruthenian to Ukrainian, and the term Ruthenian for the most part fell into disuse. It is presently used only in the Pittsburgh Metropolitanate and in part of the diocese of Križevci. The rite, formerly called generally Ruthenian, and now called either Ukrainian or Ruthenian, would more properly be termed the Byzantine Kyivan Rite, since its origin was Byzantine, and its development took place on the territory of the Metropolitanate of Kyiv. This term has greater clarity and avoids political and historical complications.

This present work begins by giving the nomenclature of the metropolitanates, eparchies and exarchates of the Byzantine Kyivan rite, based on Vatican sources published in Notizie, La Gerarchia Cattolica and Annuario Pontificio. Then it gives statistics of the Metropolitanate of Kyiv and its dioceses around the year 1772, of all metropolitanates, eparchies and exarchates of Byzantine Kyivan rite from 1943 until the present time, of all metropolitanates, eparchies and exarchates of Byzantine Kyivan rite for the years 1929, 1932, 1962 and 1974, based on the statistics published by the Sacred Congregation for the Oriental Churches. Next it gives the nomenclature and statistics of all metropolitanates, eparchies and exarchates of Byzantine Kyivan rite in the United States and Canada, based on information from the Official Catholic Directory, and the historical background and statistics of religious orders and congregations for men and women of Byzantine Kyivan rite based on information published by the Sacred Congregation for the Oriental Churches. A special insert has been included for the Basilian Order of St. Josaphat giving historical and statistical information based on Vatican documents and the catalogues of the Order for the years 1617, 1748, 1773-74, 1867, 1882, and 1890 until the present. Extra figures have been added to the statistics for the Sisters Servants of Mary Immaculate, based on their own catalogues for the years 1938, 1955, 1965 and 1972. The study concludes with statistical summaries, with diagrams showing the divisions of the eparchies of Philadelphia, Winnipeg and Mukačevo, and with maps of the Kyivan Metropolitanate of 1772, of Byzantine Kyivan eparchies and exarchates on native territories, and of Byzantine Kyivan metropolitanates and eparchies in North America.

After Kyiv, which is in first place, all metropolitanates, eparchies and exarchates are arranged in alphabetical order, according to the name of the Sees or of the countries. Geographical names of Cyrillic origin and personal names are spelled according to modern Ukrainian pronunciation and the Parisian Slavic Institute transliteration, with the exception of Kyiv, which is spelled Kyiv, a modified Library of Congress transliteration, or as they appear in the documents. Houses of religious orders, except for Halyčyna and Zakarpattja, are arranged alphabetically according to countries.

ART. I

NOMENCLATURE OF THE METROPOLITANATES, EPARCHIES AND EXARCHATES ACCORDING TO THE ANNUARIO PONTIFICIO

The series now known as the Annuario Pontificio was first published in 1716 by Chracas Printing House in Rome under the title Notizie dell'anno 1716, and was continued year after year, with interruptions in 1799-1800, 1803-1806, 1809-1817 on account of the Napoleonic Wars, and in 1871 on account of the termination of the Pontifical State. From 1850 to 1870 it was published by the Reverenda Camera Apostolica, from 1872 to 1884 by the Tipografia Monaldi, and since 1885 by the Tipografia Poliglotta Vaticana. The title until 1859 was Notizie dell'anno..., from 1860 to 1870 it was Annuario Pontificio, from 1872 to 1911 it was La Gerarchia Cattolica, and since 1912 it has been again Annuario Pontificio. Although not marked as an official publication except for the years 1899-1904 and 1912-1924, the series contains information collected from official sources, and has always been used as a reliable Vatican directory.

Latin rite dioceses began to be included in the Annuario in 1724, and Kyiv was first included in 1747. All other dioceses of the Kyivan Metropolitanate were included from 1767 on. Although some of these dioceses were suppressed by Moscow at the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth centuries, the Vatican continued to list some of them for many years, probably in the hope of reviving them if the political situation would allow. Kyivan rite dioceses outside of the Metropolitanate of Kyiv were included gradually—Mukačevo in 1772, Križevci in 1777, Prjašiv in 1818, Hajdudorog and Winnipeg in 1913, Philadelphia in 1914 and the rest after 1918 as they were established.

The terms Rito Ruteno, dei Ruteni or Ruthenorum were applied to all of these dioceses, except for Hajdudorog, although Hajdudorog was also Ruthenian since it had split from the diocese of Mukačevo (3). Križevci, originally a Croatian diocese, became predominantly Ruthenian when many people from Halyčyna and Zakarpattja moved into the territory at the time of the Austro-Hungarian domination. Križevci was listed as Crisiensis Ruthenorum in the Annuario from 1863 until 1940. The nomenclature of the dioceses is not constant, but varies according to the circumstances. World War II brought changes; for some eparchies and exarchates, the terms dei Rutheni and Ruthenorum were retained, for some they were omitted, and for the majority they were replaced by dei Ucraini and Ucrainorum.

(3) See the diagram for Mukačevo in Art. 9.

The last listing of Kyiv as an archdiocese is in 1798. From 1851 to 1861 it is listed again, but jointly with the See of Halyč, with the reference See Lviv (4), although under the entry Lviv there is no mention of it. From 1862 until 1885 inclusively, under the entry Kyiv, there is the reference See Lviv, and under Lviv are included jointly the names of both Halyč and Kyiv (5). From 1886 to 1903, under the entry Kyiv is still the reference See Lviv, but under the entry Lviv there is no mention of Kyiv. From 1904 on, there is no longer any listing at all for Kyiv. The joint listing of Kyiv, Halyč and Lviv indicates that, at least between 1851 and 1903, the Sees of Kyiv, Halyč and Lviv were connected, and therefore the Archbishop Metropolitan of Kyiv, the Metropolitan of Halyč and the Archbishop of Lviv were considered as one and the same person.

STATISTICS OF METROPOLITANATES,
EPARCHIES AND EXARCHATES
ACCORDING TO THE SACRED CONGREGATION
FOR THE ORIENTAL CHURCHES

The statistics of the hierarchy and faithful of Eastern rite Churches were published by the Sacred Congregation for the Oriental Churches for the first time in 1929, and were for private use only (8). The data are arranged according to different rites, each rite subdivided into the various countries in which the faithful resided. The Byzantine Kyivan rite is called Rito Greco Ruteno and the faithful are spread out in eight countries: Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Romania, the United States, Canada and Brazil. On pages 104 and 105, there is a reassumption of the statistics of the group belonging to the Greek Ruthenian rite, in chart form, which has been reproduced at the end of article 8. There are nine Greek Ruthenian dioceses: Lviv, Peremyśl and Stanislaviv in Poland, Mukačevo and Prjašiv in Czechoslovakia, Križevci in Yugoslavia, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh in the United States, and Winnipeg in Canada. There are two Apostolic Administrations: Siret in Romania and Miskolc in Hungary. Hajdudorog, which should have been included in this group because it was formed from part of the Mukačevo and Prjašiv dioceses, is completely omitted from the 1929 statistics.

In 1932, new statistics were published (9), with historical backgrounds of the various oriental rites, nations and groups. The data are arranged according to oriental rite nations, such as Armenians, Ruthenians, etc. The Ruthenians are spread out in seven countries: Poland, Czechoslovakia, Romania, the United States, Canada, Brazil and Argentina. Križevci, which had been included in the 1929 statistics in the group Greco Ruteno, in 1932 was placed in the new group Jugoslavi. Miskolc remained in the Ruthenian group (10), and Hajdudorog was placed in the new group Ungheresi.

All of the dioceses which in 1929 had been in the group Greco Ruteno, or in 1932 in the groups Ruteni, Jugoslavi or Ungheresi, were rearranged in the 1962 statistics (11). In the group Ruteni there are included only two dioceses, Mukačevo and Pittsburgh. Prjašiv is placed under the new name of Slovacchi. The rest of the Greek Ruthenian dioceses are in 1962 placed under the new name of Ucraini. Thus the Greek Ruthenians, who had been together in one group in the statistics of 1929, have now been divided into five groups with new dioceses and exarchates added: Ucraini being comprised of sixteen dioceses and exarchates, Ruteni of two, Ungheresi of two, Jugoslavi of one, and Slovacchi of one.

In 1974, the fourth statistics were published by the Sacred Congregation for the Oriental Churches (12). The arrangement into divisions is the same as that of 1962, the changes being mainly in numbers. The Ruthenians have acquired an additional two dioceses with the split of Pittsburgh. The Ukrainians have added one diocese with the split of Edmonton, and a new exarchate has been added in Argentina. The total number of Ukrainian dioceses and exarchates is now eighteen: Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Chicago, Edmonton, France, Germany, Great Britain, Lemkivščyna, Lviv, New Westminster, Peremyśl, Philadelphia, Saskatoon, Stamford, Stanislaviv, Toronto and Winnipeg. The Ruthenians have four: Mukačevo, Parma, Passaic and Pittsburgh; the Hungarians have two: Hajdudorog and Miskolc; the Yugoslavians have one: Križevci; the Slovaks have one: Prjašiv. For those dioceses which were suppressed by the Communists is given the last number available before their suppression. In comparison with the statistics of 1929 and 1932, those of 1962 and 1974 indicate that the number of dioceses, as well as of religious congregations and educational institutions depending from the Sacred Congregation for the Oriental Churches, has increased considerably (13).

METROPOLITANATES, EPARCHIES AND EXARCHATES OF THE BYZANTINE KYIVAN RITE IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA, NOMENCLATURE AND STATISTICS ACCORDING TO THE OFFICIAL CATHOLIC DIRECTORY (14)

The Official Catholic Directory, a directory, almanac and clergy list, was first published in 1886 by Hoffman Brothers in Milwaukee-Chicago, and later in 1897 by M.H. Wiltzing and Co. Since 1912 it has been published by P.J. Kenedy and Sons in New York.

Dioceses of Byzantine Kyivan rite were not organized until 1912 in Winnipeg, Canada, and 1913 in Philadelphia, Pa. Information concerning Byzantine Kyivan rite parishes before 1914 can be found scattered throughout the data given for Latin rite parishes and Latin rite dioceses in which the faithful happened to be included. From 1914 on, the information is given under the separate dioceses of Byzantine Kyivan rite—Philadelphia and Winnipeg. In 1924, the Philadelphia diocese split into Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. After World War II, the Philadelphia diocese again split into three, Philadelphia, Stamford and Chicago, and the Pittsburgh diocese into three, Pittsburgh, Passaic and Parma. The diocese of Winnipeg, after World War II, split into five dioceses, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Toronto, Saskatoon and New Westminster. The Byzantine Kyivan rite dioceses of the United States are listed in the Official Catholic Directory after all of the Latin rite dioceses of the United States until the year 1963; since then they have been listed alphabetically with the Latin rite dioceses. The Canadian Byzantine Kyivan rite dioceses are always listed after all of the Canadian Latin rite dioceses, but after 1964 statistics for Canadian dioceses are not given, only a general listing.

It was impossible to determine exact numbers for the Byzantine Kyivan rite population, especially in the early days, because the faithful were spread out among Latin rite parishes, there being no parishes of their own rite in many areas of the United States and Canada. The faithful in such cases often frequent Latin rite parishes, and if they are counted at all, are counted as members of those parishes. It is entirely possible that, even at present, there is a good number of people who are not counted as Byzantine Kyivan rite Catholics because they have not access to parishes of their own rite and attend Latin rite churches. In cases of ritual mixed marriages, the couple may attend churches of both rites, and not be counted in the Byzantine rite population of their diocese.

The data for the Official Catholic Directory are collected from the respective dioceses, which gather and send in the figures printed in the publication. Since the information comes directly from the dioceses themselves, the figures are as correct as the bishops and chanceries were able to give them.

ART. 6

RELIGIOUS ORDERS AND CONGREGATIONS FOR MEN (15)

1. HISTORICAL SKETCHES

1. Benedyktyny

In 1948, a monastery of Byzantine Kyivan rite was founded by the Benedictines in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, which was later transferred to Butler, Pa. This monastery was dependent upon the Abbey of St. Procopius in Lisle, Illinois, and was made up of Byzantine Kyivan rite monks coming from that abbey.

2. Francyskany

The Ordo Fratrum Minorum opened a monastery of Byzantine Kyivan rite in the United States in 1945 on the initiative of Father Josafat Ananelyč, OFM. The Commissariat was created in 1947, and then the Custodia of St. Mary of the Angels, with headquarters at Canaan, Connecticut.

3. Redemptorysty

The Redemptorists, founded in 1732 by St. Alphonse Ligouri (1696-1787), began to work among Byzantine Kyivan rite people in Canada in 1899. At first, they celebrated the liturgy and administered the sacraments according to the Latin rite, but in 1906 they received permission from Rome to use the Byzantine Kyivan rite. In 1910, Archbishop Metropolitan Andriy Šeptyckyj, seeing the good work of the Belgian Redemptorists in Canada, requested the Superior General to open an Eastern rite branch of the Redemptorists in his archdiocese. In 1913 a monastery was opened in Halyčyna in Univ, and in the same year the Vice Province of Lviv was created, dependent upon Belgium. In 1918, another monastery was opened in Zbojiska. The monasteries of Canada, at first dependent upon Belgium, in 1952 were formed into the Vice Province of Yorkton and made directly dependent upon the Superior General, and subsequently made into a Province in 1961. The Redemptorists undertook missions in the United States, Belgium, France, Germany and Great Britain in 1945, and in Australia in 1950. Redemptorists from Bohemia went to Zakarpattja and opened a house in Stropkiv in the diocese of Prjašiv in 1921. Later they opened the houses of Mychajlivci and Sabyniv in the same diocese, and became a Vice Province in 1945 dependent on Prague.

1. Salesijany

The Salesians were founded in 1859 by St. John Bosco. In 1932, Bishop Mykola Čarnekyj, with the cooperation of Bishop Josafat Kocylovskyj and Fathers Petro Holynskyj and Vasyl Hrynyk, began sending Ukrainian boys from the diocese of Peremyšl to Italy to study to become Salesians. When these Salesians finished their studies, they could not return to Ukraine, on account of the Communist occupation after World War II. They therefore remained in Italy, some taking direction of the Pontifical Ukrainian Minor Seminary of St. Josaphat in Rome, and a few going to Argentina to work among the Byzantine Kyivan rite faithful there.

5. Studyty

In the year 463, the Consul Studius founded a monastery in Constantinople which came to be called Studion. One of the superiors of this monastery, Theodore († 826), later known as St. Theodore Studite, compiled a typikon or collection of rules, based on the rule of St. Basil the Great. He and his rule were so influential that during his term as superior the membership of the monastery grew from about a dozen to approximately a thousand monks. His typikon was adopted by the monks on Mount Athos, and also by Sts. Antonij and Theodosij, the founders of Pečerska Lavra in Kyiv. Pečerska Lavra was the cradle of monasticism in the Metropolitanate of Kyiv, which until 1458 included the present three nationalities of Ukrainian, Belorussian and Russian. The monks at that time were not called by the name Studite or Basilian, but according to the eastern custom by the simple designation of "monks", and each monastery was independent. The flourishing monasticism of the Metropolitanate of Kyiv began to decline after the destruction of Kyiv by the Tartars in 1240. After the Union of Berestja in 1596, the Archbishop Metropolitan of Kyiv and Halyč, Veljamyn Rutskyj (1613-1637), undertook the reform of monasticism based on western models, and in 1617 organized the monasteries into a central system, dependent upon the Metropolitan. The reformed monks took the name of Order of St. Basil the Great, and monasticism of the former eastern type gradually ceased to exist in the Byzantine Kyivan rite Catholic Church.

The revival of monasticism of the earlier type in the Byzantine Kyivan rite Catholic Church had a modest beginning in 1900, when a few men of rural origin began to live the common life together in the village of Olesko by Zoločiv. When they came to the attention of Archbishop Metropolitan Andrij Šeptyckyj, he transferred them to Vulko by Lviv in 1901, and two years later he gave them a field in Sknyliv and built them a monastery there. Since there were no monks who were priests among them, they went to services in the nearby parish church. In 1906, the Metropolitan gave them a typikon of monastic rules based on the typikon of St. Theodore Studite, and in 1908 they opened a monastery in Kamenica, in Bosnia and in the same year their first priest was ordained. In 1911, Kazymyr, the brother of the Metropolitan, joined the group, taking the name of Klymentij, and he was ordained in 1915. A house of study was opened in Lviv in 1914, and in 1916 the monks took the name of Studites. In 1919 they opened a house in Univ and in 1921 another in Zarvanycja. They opened an orphanage in Lyčakiv in 1927 and in 1931 monasteries in Polisia and Pidlaša. In 1951 they opened a monastery in Woodstock, Ontario and in 1965 one in Marino near Rome. They moved to Paraguay in 1975 and in 1977 opened a monastery in Passaic, New Jersey.

6. Vasylijany

a) Development

Monasticism in the Metropolitanate of Kyiv probably began soon after the conversion in 988. The annals refer to the existence of monasteries around the middle of the eleventh century. The monastery of Pečerska Lavra, although not the oldest monastery, soon became the most important, introducing the Studite Rule and becoming nearly independent of both the Kyivan Princes and the Metropolitans of Kyiv. It became the cradle of candidates for bishops and founders of new monasteries. The monks did not carry a specific name, merely being known as "monks", as are all Eastern rite monks not in union with Rome even today. After the Union of Berestja, they had to assume a name to distinguish themselves from the diverse Latin rite Orders. In 1617 they underwent a reform by Metropolitan Rutskyj and were centralized, taking the name of Order of St. Basil the Great. In the beginning, there was only one Province, that of Holy Trinity. In 1739, a second Province was organized—Protection of the Blessed Virgin Mary, made up exclusively of monasteries from the southwestern dioceses of the Metropolitanate of Kyiv. In 1743, both Provinces joined, elected a General Curia, and assumed the name of Ordo S. Basilii Magni Ruthenorum. The territory of the Metropolitanate of Kyiv was split into three parts in 1772 and divided among Austria, Poland and Russia, necessitating the creation of two new Provinces, Holy Saviour in Austria and St. Nicholas in Russia; this took place in 1780. During the years 1795-1815, as Russia occupied the territories of Holy Trinity and Protection Provinces, these Provinces and the St. Nicholas Province were gradually suppressed, leaving only Holy Saviour Province in the Austrian occupied territory of Halyčyna. In Austria a great number of monasteries had been suppressed in 1783 by Emperor Joseph II and the Order slowly declined (16). From the period 1882-1904, the Order underwent a reform under the direction of the Jesuits and began to grow year by year. In 1897 they undertook missionary work among people of their own rite who had immigrated to Brazil. In 1902 they opened a mission in Canada, in 1904 they took direction of the Pontifical Ruthenian College in Rome, and in 1908 opened a mission in the United States. In 1920, they moved to the dioceses of Mukačevo and Prjašiv in Zakarpattja, in 1923 they went to the diocese of Hajdudorog in Hungary, and in 1924 to the diocese of Križevci in Jugoslavia and to Romania. In 1932 the Halyčyna Province split into three Provinces—Halyčyna, Zakarpattja (with Hungary, Romania and Jugoslavia), and Canada (with the United States)—and a Vice Province in Brazil. The General Curia was elected in 1931, and in 1932 it took up residence in Rome. In 1935 the Basilians went to Argentina as part of the Brazilian Province. In 1937, the Romanian Province was established, in 1947 the Hungarian Province, and in 1948 the Provinces of Czechoslovakia and the United States. In 1948 the Vice Province of Brazil was raised to a Province, and in Argentina a Vice Province, separate from Brazil, was established.

(16) In 1772, there came under Austrian domination:

The detailed list is found in ARCHIVUM SECRETUM VATICANUM (ASV), Archivio della Nunziatura di Varsavia, t. 10, ff. 7-10, 13; published in BLAŽEJOVSKÝ J., De potestate Metropolitaram Kioviensium in clerum regularem, Rome 1973, p. 170-176. The two monasteries of Holy Trinity Province were Bučač and Horodok. For the figures for 1882, cf. note 29. Father M. Vavryk, in his Narys rozvytku i stanu Vasylijanskoho Čyna XVII-XX st., Rome 1979, p. 51, gives the number of monasteries which came under Austrian domination as 50. On p. 51 he gives the number of religious as 319, but on p. 52 he gives it as 316. All three of his figures are undocumented.

During World War II, the Provinces of Halyčyna, Zakarpattja, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania came under Communist domination and between the years 1946-1951 their monasteries were suppressed and the monks dispersed. Some of these religious went to Rome, and several others went to Provinces in diaspora—Argentina, Brazil, Canada and the United States. In 1972, the Basilians in Poland were organized into a Delegatura under the General Curia. The Basilians in Yugoslavia did not grow, and after the suppression of Zakarpattja became dependent upon the General Curia. Since the United States Province was made up of Basilians from Halyčyna, the Transcarpathian and Hungarian monks coming to the United States after World War II formed their own monasteries in Uniontown and elsewhere, and are presently still under the General Curia. The Basilians began missionary work in Great Britain and for a while in Austria, and these missions were dependent upon the General Curia.

b) Statistics: Sources and Problems

Until the twentieth century, the Basilians were the only religious order for men in the Byzantine Kyivan rite, and they are the strongest still. They have exercised in the past and in the present are exercising considerable influence on the events of the Kyivan and Halyčian Metropolitanates and on the Byzantine Kyivan rite. Therefore their statistics are included in the present work in detail.

The statistics begin in 1617 when the Basilians were organized into one Province. The next statistics are for the year 1748, after they were organized at the Chapter of Dubno (1743) into two Provinces under one General Curia. The third statistics are for 1773-74, a few years before their division into four provinces in 1780. The fourth statistics are for 1867 when three Provinces died out and only Holy Saviour Province remained. The fifth statistics are for 1882, the year that the reform was initiated. From 1890 on, the statistics come year after year, missing years here and there when the catalogues were not published.

The number of monks in the Metropolitanate of Kyiv is hard to determine until 1617. There was no central administration and statistics are not available. From 1617 on we have some reports to Rome and some documents from which the number can be estimated. In 1859 and in 1867, Basilian catalogues were printed. In 1882 the number of Basilians can be determined from the directories of the dioceses of Lviv and Peremyšl. Since 1890 there have been catalogues printed regularly. From 1890 to 1904 they were printed by the Jesuits, under whose care the Basilians were at that time. From 1905 to 1932 they were printed by the Province of Halyčyna (Holy Saviour), with 1907, 1915, 1918 and 1919 missing. From 1933 to 1947 the catalogues were printed by single Provinces with some years missing on account of the war; there are the catalogues of Halyčyna for 1933-39, of Zakarpattja for 1933-38, 1940-42 and 1944, of Canada for 1933-47, of Romania for 1940, and of the Vice Province of Brazil for 1933-38 and 1946. Between 1949 and 1978 there have been thirteen catalogues printed by the General Curia in Rome (17).

The number of Basilians is not always given accurately even after the regular catalogues began to be printed in 1890. The monks were in the process of expanding, and were in movement to distant places. Different compilers of the catalogues had various methods and systems for computing the data. From 1932 to 1947, when each Province was publishing its own catalogue, giving information regarding other Provinces, that information often was not exact since communication was poor. Discrepancies therefore appear between the information contained in one catalogue and that of another. In the chart which follows here, in case of such discrepancy only the information about a Province which was printed in its own catalogue has been used.

In the catalogues from 1949 on, a problem is encountered, caused by the suppression of five Provinces behind the Iron Curtain by Communistic governments. The first twelve catalogues of the General Curia give the last certain figures before suppression, repeated from one catalogue to the next. Only the thirteenth, of 1978, gives the actual names of those religious presumed still to be alive behind the Iron Curtain. A special difficulty arises from 1949 on, in figuring the grand total number of religious when a separate rubric is given for those belonging to the General Curia or dependent upon the Curia, because these religious often also belong to some Province; in several cases these individuals were counted twice (18). In this study, religious of this group have been placed under the rubric of Jugoslavia, Poland or Various.

Another difficulty arises from the fact that the years given in the titles of the catalogues do not always correspond to the years for which information is given. For instance, the catalogue of 1905-06 was published in 1905, that of 1959-60 in 1959, that of 1968-69 in 1968, that of 1975-76 in 1975 and that of 1978-79 in 1978, thus anticipating the data for the second years of the titles. The information from these catalogues has therefore been considered as valid only for the first years of the titles in this present study.

(17) The list of catalogues is printed in Catalogus Ordinis Basiliani Sti Josaphat 1975-76, Rome 1975, p. 81-84.

(18) For example, in the catalogue of 1949 (pp. 5-6, 29, 30, 92) Efraim Krevei and (pp. 5-6, 44, 46, 92) Modest Gnesko are counted twice. The totals given in the present statistics differ from those of the catalogues on this account, especially for the years 1949 and 1950.

The catalogues give the number of religious in each house, but do not always indicate the total number of houses in each Province or country. In this study, the monasteries and residences have been counted together and the total for each Province or country placed under the common heading Houses.

The Basilian catalogues are arranged according to Provinces rather than countries. In this study, the information regarding Ukrainian territories since 1867 has been rearranged according to geographical Provinces (Halyčyna and Zakarpattja), and that regarding all other territories has been arranged according to the political boundaries of various countries. The catalogues contain figures of reformed Basilians (19). A few of the monks in Halyčyna and Zakarpattja chose not to undergo the reform (Halyčyna 1882 and Zakarpattja 1920). These Basilians were permitted to retain some monasteries, and as they died out, the reformed Basilians gradually took over one after another of these monasteries. In the catalogues, the number of novices in each house is given. In the totals, however, there is not a separate heading for novices; they are included under the heading Priests, Students or Brothers, whatever the case might have been. In this study the arrangement of the catalogues for novices has been followed.

c) Explanation of Chart Headings

In the charts for the Basilians which follow, the heading Grand total gives approximate numbers for the years 1617, 1748 and 1773-74. For the year 1867 on, the grand total includes only the figures for the surviving Province of Holy Saviour of Halyčyna. The year 1882 gives the total number of Basilians in Halyčyna before the reform of that year. The grand totals for the years 1867 to 1931 inclusively are the same as those under the heading Halyčyna, since there was only one Province during this period, that of Halyčyna, and the Basilians in Brazil, Canada, Jugoslavia and the United States were considered as missionaries from Halyčyna. Even the Basilians from Zakarpattja, Hungary and Romania, undergoing reform under the direction of the Halyčyna Province during the years 1920-31 are included as belonging to the Halyčyna Province for these years. From 1932 to 1948 there was no general catalogue. The figures for the years 1932 to 1937 were published by each Province separately and the grand totals are computed by adding the figures each Province reports for itself. From 1938 to 1948 the Provinces published catalogues only sporadically, and it is not possible to compute a grand total, the information being insufficient. Father Michael Vavryk gives totals for the years 1939 and 1947-49, but his figures are questionable (20). Between 1949 and 1978 there have been thirteen catalogues published by the General Curia, some of which include grand totals. These grand totals are not exact, since accurate numbers for the suppressed Provinces were unknown. Only the catalogue of 1978-79 includes the names of those Basilians presumed still to be alive within the suppressed territories. In the charts, the grand totals include Basilians in the suppressed Provinces only for the years 1949 and 1950. After this, they are not counted in the grand totals until the year 1978 (21).

(19) The unreformed Basilians, after the death of their Protoihumen, K. Sarnyckyj (+ 1909), were subordinated to the reformed Basilians, and began to be included in the catalogues. Cf. VAVRYK M., Narys rozvytku..., p. 64.

The Basilians of Kyivan rite came to Rome in 1626 as procurators of the Metropolitanate and of the Basilian Order, being appointed by the Metropolitan, who was usually also Protoarchimandrite of the Order. After 1686, when Rome expressly forbade that the Metropolitan be elected to the office of Protoarchimandrite, the procurator was appointed by the Protoarchimandrite, and acted only occasionally as procurator for the Metropolitanate. Ever since 1795, when the Russians occupied most of the territory of the Metropolitanate and the activity of the Metropolitan was hindered, the procurator has acted only for the Basilian Order. In 1639, the Church of Sts. Sergius and Bacchus with the adjoining residence was donated by Antonio Cardinal Barberini as the site of a future Pontifical Ruthenian College in Rome, and became the residence of the procurator. The discussion is still lively as to whether this property was donated to the Metropolitanate of Kyiv and Halyč, or to the Basilian Order. In 1897, after several years of vacancy, the building was remodelled to serve as the newly founded Pontifical Ruthenian College under the direction of the Jesuits, and in 1904 the direction of the college was entrusted to the Basilians. In 1932, under the new name of Pontifical Ukrainian Seminary of St. Josaphat, the college

(20) See notes 35 and 36.

(21) The religious and houses of Halyčyna, Zakarpattja, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania are not counted for the years 1951-1975 in the grand totals, since figures in the catalogues for these years are not certain. From 1958 to 1975 the figures are always the same, and on p. 46 of the catalogue of 1958 it is noted that the figures for Halyčyna are taken from 1939, for Zakarpattja from 1950, and for Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Romania from 1949. The same note is repeated on p. 44 of the catalogue of 1960, and on p. 45 of the catalogue of 1962. However, the figures for Halyčyna: religious 349 (priests 110, students 97, brothers 142) are considerably different from those given in the catalogue of 1939, p. 29, which are: religious 373 (priests 133, students 91, brothers 149).

was transferred to its present site on the Janiculum, and the Basilians remained as superiors. The old building then became the residence of the Basilian General Curia, which in 1932 moved to Rome from Halyčyna. In 1960 the General Curia was transferred to new quarters on the Aventine, and the old building was sold. The Basilians therefore now have two houses in Rome, that of the General Curia on the Aventine, and that of the Pontifical Seminary on the Janiculum. Until 1950, all the Basilians residing in Rome belonged to some Province elsewhere, and so have not been counted in the grand totals except as members of their own Provinces. From 1951 on, several of those Basilians who came to Rome from the suppressed Provinces joined a Province in the free world. Those who did not so join are not counted in the grand totals until 1972, because their number is hard to establish. For 1972, 1975 and 1978, their number being approximately established (22), they have been placed on the chart under the heading Various, and included in the grand totals.

Monasteries existed already in Halyčyna in the eleventh century. The territory of Halyčyna was divided in the twelfth century into two dioceses, Peremyśl and Halyč (later Lviv) and the monasteries were under the jurisdiction of the Bishops. When Peremyśl in 1692 and Lviv in 1700 came into union with Rome, the monasteries also became Catholic. In 1739 these monasteries, together with those of the southwestern dioceses of the Metro-

(22) The catalogues of 1972, 1975 and 1978 enumerate the Basilians directly dependent upon the Curia. If one adds together the number of Basilians of Yugoslavia, Poland and Zakarpattja with the number of Hungarian Basilians in the United States, all dependent directly upon the General Curia, and subtracts this number from the total of Basilians dependent upon the Curia, the resulting figure must be that of Basilians in Rome not counted anywhere. These Basilians have therefore been placed under the heading Various. In 1972, evidently one individual was both priest and student; in the catalogue he was counted as a priest in the total of Basilians dependent on the Curia, but in the detailed list, he was counted as a student. This discrepancy results in the figure -1 for the students of 1972 in the following chart, although the total of 32 remains the same as that given in the catalogue. Therefore one can conclude that there were 4 priests in Rome directly dependent upon the General Curia.

politanate of Kyiv were organized into the Province of Protection of the Blessed Virgin Mary. In 1772, when Halyčyna came under Austrian domination, the Province of Holy Saviour was formed for monasteries in Halyčyna. This Province went into a decline during the Josephine reform when several monasteries were confiscated, but it was the only Province to survive after 1795 when the Russians began to suppress the monasteries outside of Halyčyna. In 1882 the Basilians underwent a reform, sometimes called the "Dobromyl Reform", and began to grow, expanding to Brazil, Canada, Yugoslavia and the United States. They took over the direction of the reform in Zakarpattja, Hungary and Romania, making these monasteries part of the Halyčyna Province. When in 1931 the Halyčyna Province was split and the General Curia was elected, the Halyčyna Province by far had the largest number of houses and monks, and had the largest representation in the General Curia. In 1946 the monasteries in Halyčyna itself were confiscated and the monks dispersed, so the Province, at least on the surface, ceased to exist, although the pre-suppression figures continued to be included in the catalogues.

Sources indicate the existence of monasteries in Zakarpattja in the fourteenth century. The monasteries became Catholic when Zakarpattja accepted union with Rome in 1646. Union with Rome had not much noticeable effect on the traditional way of life of the monks, and it was not until 1920 that they agreed to undergo the reform. The reform of 1920-1931 was accomplished under the direction of Holy Saviour Province of Halyčyna. The figures shown on the chart for Zakarpattja, as for Hungary, Yugoslavia and Romania, in the years 1920-1931 indicate the number of monasteries undergoing reform, and the number of monks living in these monasteries, whether they were of regional origin or from Halyčyna directing the reform (23). In 1931

(23) The catalogues of 1924-1926 include additional tables indicating the number of religious belonging to the «provinces» of Halyčyna, Zakarpattja and Romania. The catalogues of 1927-1931 dropped the word provinces, and divided the religious under headings indicating their origin: Zakarpattja, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Romania, Others. These figures are as follows:

	Provinces			Origin
	1924	1925	1926	1927	1928	1929	1930	1931
Halyčyna	253	265	284

Hungary				14	15	19	17	19
Jugoslavia				9	7	8	9	9
Others				295	313	329	350	365

Halyčyna: 253 (pr 100, st 66, br 87), 265 (97, 77, 91), 284 (100, 94, 90).

Zakarpattja: 36 (7, 21, 8), 35 (7, 21, 7), 44 (7, 28, 9).

Romania: 3 (2, -, 1), 5 (2, 2, 1), 10 (3, 1, 6).

the Province of St. Nicholas for Zakarpattja was officially formed, which included the monasteries in Hungary, Yugoslavia and Romania. The Romanian monasteries in 1937, the Hungarian in 1947, and those on Czechoslovakian territories after the war in 1948 formed their own respective Provinces. In 1947 the Yugoslavian religious came under the direct jurisdiction of the General Curia, and in the same year the monasteries in Zakarpattja were confiscated, the monks dispersed, and the Province of St. Nicholas externally ceased to exist, although the last known figures for it continued to be included in the catalogues.

The Basilians went to Argentina from Brazil in 1935, and formed part of the Province of St. Joseph, which at this time became known as the Argentinian-Brazilian Province. In 1948, Argentina was made into a Vice Province and separated from Brazil.

In 1897 the Basilians went to Brazil from Halyčyna, and until 1931 Brazil was a missionary enterprise of the Halyčyna Province. In 1931 it was made into the Vice Province of St. Joseph, and in 1948 into a Province, at the same time that Argentina became a Vice Province.

The Basilians began work in Canada in 1902 as part of the Halyčyna Province. In 1931 they were organized into the Province of the Sacred Heart for Canada and the United States and remained so until the United States separated from Canada in 1948.

The monasteries on the territory of Czechoslovakia, either having existed since 1931 as part of the Province of St. Nicholas, or having been created after World War II, were organized into the Czechoslovakian Province of Sts. Cyril and Methodius in 1948. In 1950, all of these monasteries were confiscated and the monks dispersed.

The Basilians of Hungary accepted the reform along with the monks from Zakarpattja in 1924, and in 1931 became part of the Province of St. Nicholas. In 1948 they were made into the Province of St. Stephen. In 1951 the monasteries were confiscated and the monks dispersed.

The Basilians, going to Jugoslavia from Halyčyna in 1924, in 1931 became part of the Province of St. Nicholas of Zakarpattja. After World War II, they came under the direct jurisdiction of the General Curia.

The Basilians opened a monastery on the national territory of Poland in Warsaw in 1731. This monastery was suppressed and confiscated by the Russians in 1872, but was recovered in 1930 by the Halyčyna Province. After World War II, other houses were opened to take care of Ukrainians in present Poland. These monasteries appear in the catalogues only since 1972, under the heading “Delegatura” depending on the General Curia (24).

The Basilians of Romania agreed in 1924 to accept the reform under the direction of the Halyčyna Province. In 1931 they were united to the Zakarpattja Province, and in 1937 were made into the Province of St. Joseph. In 1948, the monasteries were confiscated and the monks dispersed.

The Basilians had a very modest beginning in the United States in 1908 with one religious as missionary from the Halyčyna Province. In 1931, the United States became part of the Canadian Province, and in 1948 was made into the separate Province of the Dormition of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The heading Various includes the Transcarpathian and Hungarian Basilians who left their Provinces after World War II and went to the United States. They founded monasteries directly dependent upon the General Curia, and did not join the already existing United States Province, which had been formed by Basilians from Halyčyna. The mission houses of England (1965-1968) and Austria (1958-1965) are also included under the heading Various, but not the religious themselves, since they were sent from Canada and the United States and were therefore already counted as belonging to those Provinces. In 1968, England became part of the Canadian Province, and Austria was transferred to the secular clergy. Since 1972, the Basilians residing in Rome in the General Curia or at the Pontifical Ukrainian Seminary of St. Josaphat, who did not belong to any Province in the free world, have also been included under the heading Various.

(24) Poland was part of the Halyčyna Province, and therefore has not been counted separately in the grand total until 1972, when the Delegatura was organized. The numbers for 1949 for Warsaw are from VAVRYK M., Narys rozvytky..., p. 70.

(25) The total of Basilians was given by Father Hennadij Chmelnyckyj in the process for the beatification of St. Josaphat (1628) as "circa sessanta". Cf. VELYKYJ A., St. Josaphat Hieromartyr, Rome 1952, t. 1, p. 179. The number of monasteries is in the acts of the first chapter (1617). Cf. Archeograficeskij Sbornik, t. 12, Vilno 1900, p. 7-8.

The detailed lists, sent to Rome by the two provincials, are in ARCHIVUM SACRAE CONGREGATIONIS DE PROPAGANDA FIDE (APF), Congregazioni Particolari, t. 114, ff. 145-146; 161-162, published in BLAŽEJOVSKYJ D., De potestate..., p. 162-169. On p. 162, the number of religious in Czortkiv monastery should read 10 instead of 16, and Peremyšl should not be counted as a monastery because at that time it had been transferred to the secular clergy. The numbers for alibi and uncertain are taken from VAVRYK M., Narys rozvytku..., p. 31-37. Suprasl with its two independent houses in Warszawa and Kuznycia, although it did not join the centralized provinces, has been included here because it followed the reform of 1617. Cf. APF, Congr. Part., t. 120, ff. 240-259.

The detailed lists, sent in by the two provincials, are in ASV, Arch. Nuz. di Varsavia, t. 110, ff. 3-10, 13. About Suprasl, see Ibid., t. 107, f. 2, and also note 26 above. The detailed lists are published in BLAŽEJOVSKYJ D., De potestate..., p. 170-177, where Torokany should read 13 instead of 15. The general statistics of the Basilian Order for 1773/74 was printed in BLAŽEJOVSKYJ D., Ukrainian and Armenian..., p. 73, but without Suprasl and Rome. For the Protection of BVM Province, the number of priests should read 459 (error in addition). The enlarged and corrected totals for the years 1773-74 are as follows:

	priests	students	brothers	TOTAL
Protection of BVM	459	67	74	600
Holy Trinity	478	117	117	612
Suprasl	20	9	4	33
Uncertain	6	3	1	10
TOTAL	963	196	196	1255

Nuntio Garampi gives for the Protection of BVM Province the number of religious as 613 (priests 466, students 73, brothers 74). Cf. ASV, Arch. Nuz. di Varsavia, t. 10, ff. 3-10. He possibly got his information from another source. Those uncertains from Holy Trinity are 1 priest and 3 students, and from Protection of BVM are supposedly 5 priests and 1 brother. These religious could be those of Czernylawa, which is not listed, and which usually had several priests and one brother. Cf. VAVRYK M., Narys rozvytki..., pp. 43-48, 105.

(28) KOSSAK M., Śematyzm Provinciiji Čyna Sv. Vasylija Velykoho v Haliciji, Lviv 1867, p. 33.

(29) These figures are based on the schematisms of the Archdiocese of Lviv for 1882, and of Peremyśl for 1882. Cf. VAVRYK M., Narys rozvytku..., p. 62.

(30) The grand total for 1900 is here corrected from 167 to 166, and for the year 1902 from 186 to 185. (In both cases there is an error in addition in the catalogues)

(31) See note 30.

(32) The catalogue giving the figures for 1907 was printed in 1906.

(33) The catalogue of 1913, p. 31 gives the total religious as 229 (priests 81, students 74, brothers 83), and on p. 32 the total is given as 238. The numbers should read priests 81, students 74 and brothers 84, giving a total of 239.

(34) The catalogue of 1917 was not available to me, but the totals of religious are quoted in the catalogue of 1920.

(35) The grand totals for 1938 could not be computed, because the figures for Zakarpattja were not published that year. The catalogues of Halyčyna for 1939, p. 29, and of Canada for 1939, p. 22, give the grand totals for 1938, but they do not agree. The former gives the total as 652 (priests 206, students 192, brothers 254) and the latter gives it as 670 (priests 218, students 197, brothers 255).

(36) Father Vavryk gives figures for 1939, but they are questionable. For example, the catalogue of the General Curia for 1939, p. 29, gives the following figures for Halyčyna in 1939: religious 373 (priests 133, students 91, brothers 149), but Father Vavryk's figures, undocumented, in Narys rozvytku..., p. 75 are: religious 346 (bishops 2, priests 129, students 83, brothers 132).

(37) Father Vavryk in Narys rozvytku..., gives the grand totals for "1947-1949". It is not clear for which year he meant the figures, and it would be rare for figures to remain static. Besides, his figures are in considerable disagreement with those given by the catalogue of the General Curia for 1949. For example, Vavryk's grand-total for 1947-1949 is 326 (bishops 5, priests 176, students 47, brothers 98), whereas that of the General-Curia for 1949 is 637 (priests 288, students 93, brothers 256, which are incorrectly added up to the total of 666 in the catalogue).

(38) The grand totals for 1949 and 1950 are the sums of all provinces and countries, with the exception of Rome. See p. 121 and notes 18 and 37.

13. Sestry Služebnyci

The Sisters Servants of Mary Immaculate began in 1892 as a group of girls in Žužel, who wanted to be sisters but had no dowries. They were encouraged and assisted by Father Kyrilo Seleckyj (1835-1918), the Pastor of Žužel, and Father Jarema Lomnyckyj, OSBM (1860-1915). Their purpose is teaching, taking care of young children, orphans, the infirm and the aged.

In 1902 they opened missions among the Ukrainian people in Canada, in 1906 they went to Križevci, Yugoslavia, in 1911 to Brazil, in 1928 to Zakarpattja, in 1935 to the United States, and in 1965 to Argentina.

Their first constitution was approved by Archbishop Metropolitan Sylvester Sembratovyč in 1892. It was modified in their first chapter in 1907, and approved by Archbishop Metropolitan Andrij Šeptyckyj. In 1929, the constitution was revised and sent to Rome, and in 1932 it was approved for seven years. In 1934 the sisters formed a central congregation dependent directly upon Rome (40). Their constitution was definitively approved by Pope Pius XII in 1956.

The general house, originally in Žužel, moved first to Krystynopil and then in 1934 to Lviv. In 1945, the General Curia was transferred to Rome unofficially, and officially transferred in 1947 to the Pontifical Ukrainian Seminary of St. Josaphat. In 1948 it was moved to its present location on via Cassia Antica.

rite according to the Studite Rule, Their purpose is to follow a life of prayer and to give help and care to people as long as it is compatible with monastic life.

15. Sestry Vasylijanky

The Sisters of St. Basil the Great of Byzantine Kyivan rite had their beginning in the year 1037, when Jaroslav the Wise founded the monastery of St. Irene for nuns in Kyiv. The reform of men's monasteries, begun in 1617 by Archbishop Metropolitan Veljamyn Rutskyj, had an influence on the Basilian Sisters, but they were not centralized. As Moscow gradually occupied most of the territory of the Kyivan Metropolitanate (1772, 1793/95, 1815), the monasteries were one after the other suppressed. The Basilian Sisters survived only in Halyčyna, which had come under the domination of Austria in 1772, but as a result of the reforms of Emperor Joseph II, the number of their monasteries was reduced to two independent houses in Slovita and Javoriv, with a total of eleven sisters and one novice (41).

In 1821, a common novitiate was established, under the direction of the secular clergy. The direction was transferred to the reformed Basilian Fathers at the Synod of Lviv in 1891, and under their direction the reform of the Basilian Sisters was carried out (1897-1902). At the Chapter of 1909, their new constitution was accepted, and this was approved by Archbishop Metropolitan Andrij Šeptyckyj. Considerable growth followed, with each monastery founding other monasteries and mission houses. In 1911, the monastery of Javoriv opened a mission in Philadelphia, Pa., and in 1912 was opened a monastery for Transcarpathian sisters in Cleveland, Ohio. The monastery of Slovita in 1917 opened a house in Križevci. The recently founded monastery of Stanislaviv in 1921 opened a house in Užhorod, and Užhorod in turn opened a house in Prjašiv in 1922. The sisters from Zakarpattja opened a house in Maria Pocz, Hungary in 1935. In 1939, the monastery in Pidmychajlivci opened a house in Berisso, Argentina, and the house in Argentina opened a house in Australia in 1967, and another in Brazil in 1972.

In 1951, Rome ordered a modification of the constitution, and the creation of a General Curia with four Provinces: The United States for sisters of Galician origin, the United States for sisters of Transcarpathian origin, Argentina, and Europe. In 1963, the Vice Province of Yugoslavia was created for Croatian sisters, and in 1966 a monastery in Albano near Rome, which had been founded in 1845 by Makryna Mečyslavska, was subordinated to the General Curia of the Basilian Sisters of the Byzantine Kyivan rite. In 1971 the Vice Province of Poland was created, and also the Delegatura in Australia. In 1951 Rome prescribed the taking of simple vows for five years, followed by the taking of perpetual vows. Each Province was required to establish a contemplative monastery, and the first such monastery was founded in 1958 in Astoria, N.Y.

The General Curia in 1951 resided in Philadelphia, Pa. In 1952 it was moved to Washington, and subsequently moved to Astoria, N.Y.; in 1954 it was transferred to its present location on the Aventine in Rome. Besides the recitation of the Divine Office, especially for the contemplatives, the Basilian Sisters have as their purpose the teaching of youth, promotion of the Catholic press, and the direction of kindergartens, orphanages, homes for the aged and hospitals.

16. Sestry Vinkentijanky

The Vincentian Sisters were founded in 1836 in Deinze, Belgium, for the purpose of taking care of orphans, the aged and the infirm.
